

QUAESTIONES ORALITATIS

PUBLISHING RULES

An electronic format of the paper should be emailed to pbto.wf@uwr.edu.pl. The paper cannot be previously published or submitted to another journal at the same time.

The text should be written following the editorial guidelines available on the journal's website in the 'guidelines for authors' section. Papers should be provided with an abstract and keywords. The document should contain the author's name, affiliation, degree or academic title, e-mail address, and ORCID ID (if possible).

Papers submitted to the Quaestiones Oralitatis journal are subject to a preliminary evaluation by the Editorial Board in terms of their substantive editorial level and compliance with the journal's topic. The editors reserve the right to suggest substantive or editorial changes before the actual expert assessment.

Papers initially approved by the Editorial Board are subject to a detailed review by two independent experts who are independent researchers. The selection of reviewers is based on the principle of avoiding a conflict of interest, i.e. selected reviewers should not have an association with the author. The impartiality of the evaluation is ensured by the system of full anonymity, both for the reviewer and the author of the paper (double-blind review system).

The reviewer assessment includes compliance of the paper with the journal's subject matter, the scientific importance of the topic under consideration, methodological correctness, clarity of the argument and the way of presenting the subject, text structure, stylistic correctness. In the case of divergent evaluations of experts, the Editorial Board appoints an additional reviewer. The review form is available on the journal's website. The list of reviewers is published in each volume and on the journal's website. Expert reviews are forwarded to authors who respond to them within the prescribed period.

The final decision to accept a paper for publication is made by the volume editor in consultation with the editor-in-chief.